

The diagram illustrates the relationship between different versions of the text "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer" and "The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn". It features a central blue area with a grid of text boxes, surrounded by a purple area with a grid of text boxes. The text boxes contain various versions of the same text, with some boxes containing the text "MOST of the adventures recorded in this book really occurred; one or two were experiences of my own, the rest those of boys who were schoolmates of mine. Huck Finn is drawn from life; Tom Sawyer also, but not from an individual—he is a combination of the characteristics of three boys whom I knew, and therefore belongs to the composite order of architecture." and others containing the text "The odd superstitions touched upon were all prevalent among children and slaves in the West at the period of this story—that is to say, thirty or forty years ago." The diagram illustrates the relationship between the original text and various versions of the text, including the text "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer" and "The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn".
